I've been using the Ocean Way Studio Plugin on two 16 bit 44.1 kHz files I recorded in Studio A at the home studio, and the results are absolutely stunning. The high-rez files will certainly be used for the mastering of the upcoming CD release, but they will also be used for the public release of the album as well. The tool offers controls for the EQs of the various Studio A microphones in one simple and intuitive interface. And the plug-in's high-resolution speaker simulator, with variable dispersion, allows sound to be directed where it can be heard effectively. I look forward to seeing what other artists create with the new Ocean Way Studio plugin. I have used a similar type of plugin in the past and it does have the same feeling as an old tape store with the reverb rooms. You can edit the settings from audio to video and even learn a bit about them on the help of the very nice comment nices. A excellent plugin for all that needs a reverb effect. ocean way studio plugin, Ocean Way Studios. The best room reverb ever!-- Tom Lang. If you are a musician or a studio owner that runs a recording space, you have probably at one time or another been frustrated by the limitations and lack of options that have been built into the widely used software like ProTools. And, if the recording space was not the one place where you had recording equipment, you will most likely have worked with a room modeler for a reverb. While you have always had many options available to you, the ones that you use are typically shaped by the way that you have been comfortable working. It is great to finally have a tool for recording spaces that has all of the ease of use, flexibility, and affordability that professional studios have been enjoying for years. And, I have been waiting for something like this for many years. So, when the opportunity arose to work with Allen Sides, the mastermind behind this reverb, I jumped at the chance and thought that he might just pull it off! I think that is why I am even more impressed with the results than I was when I first started using the Ocean Way plugin during a recording session here at Outpost. So, what is the Ocean Way plugin that you can find on Audio Jungle right now? Simply stated, it is a virtual room modeling plug-in that is the first to use the latest in room modeling algorithms to not only recreate the room acoustics, but to also control them in real time. Sound reinforcement crews and recording studios will have the ability to achieve a room full of sounds that they could not have achieved in the past. Recording studios will now have the ability to not only record the sounds of the recording space, but how it will sound live from each microphone and instrument. The plugin is available for a reasonable price and includes a fairly robust set of presets. But, f678ea9f9e
